Diamonds, gold, jewelry. Oh what a waste of money! Well, perhaps not, although some people think so, some people don’t. In this essay I’m going to talk about the positive and negative impacts of “Diamond Mining in Angola!”

Some positive impacts of diamond mining are that Angola’s GDP increases and the companies that work with miners get money from the minerals found in mines. Another outstandingly positive impact is that Angola is the third largest diamond producer which means it makes a lot of money for the country. Finally, the most positive effect is that more people get jobs from digging and it really made a change to those who didn’t have any job.

Now we are going to talk about the negative impacts. There are so many negative impacts.

The first negative impact is that it impacts society because they kill people and children for diamonds. Some even get buried alive. Another way diamond mining impacts society is that some women lose their sons because of the mining business. Wives may have to find new places to live. Such a shame.
The second impact is that diamond mining impacts the environment. How? Well mining takes up space and they cut down trees for space. Therefore, animals habitats are destroyed. Water sources such as rivers are polluted because of mining.

The most negative impact is that diamond mining effects human health. Many workers are forced to work in mines, however they do not choose to do so, as a result, some of the men and boys that are in the mining business die because of the dust in the air.

Overall, even though diamond mining could cause some of your family members or friends to get hurt, as it damages the environment we live in. Diamond mining is good for Angola because it makes the country richer. So, how can you try to help some of the families that lose their sons and husbands?
